BECOMING THE OTHER exhibition

While painting this body of work, I was thinking idly of magic, darkness, and the feminine, and half-formed, vague images began to surface. Glimpses of shaded eyes, unknown intentions, transformations, and things unearthed. Thinking about how we slide through a spectrum of selves, all of them contained inside us, in one person.

I wanted to give these tenuous fancies some substance, some life and weight, but still preserve a bit of mystery. And so I began to translate them into paintings.

BIO

Amy Abshier was raised on the Texas Gulf Coast, in a small farming and ranching community. She moved to Kansas City, Missouri to attend classes at the Kansas City Art Institute, where she received her bachelor's degree in fine art in 1997. She relocated to Ventura, California in 2001 and moved back to Kansas City in the spring of 2005.

"Most of my works are painted as a mimicry of traditional portraiture, but are (as I see them) vehicles to another concept entirely. Almost all of them have a very tongue-in-cheek wryness about them as I explore themes ranging from self-image issues to historical oddities to the dissection of fairy tales and popular culture. They differ in emotion; some are just silly, while others are plainly macabre, but they are all simple illustrations to the subtle narratives underneath."

PROFILE

I am an illustrator and fine artist interested in pop culture, folk and fairy tales, costuming, and relationships. I've worked on a large variety of projects ranging from editorial illustrations and children's book illustrations to commissioned paintings and gallery exhibitions. My work is stylized, narrative, and compelling.
